A Hand Up, Not a Hand Out

In the early 1990’s, Women’s Missionary Union had a vision for assisting women trapped in the cycle of poverty—offering a hand up, not a hand out. With that vision and five successful national pilot sites, CWJC of North Carolina established two sites in 1998 and is quickly spreading across the state.

Throughout North Carolina, in many different settings and in different types of communities, CWJC is bringing hope for a brighter future: Empowering women in need by providing resources to help them move from dependency to self-sufficiency.

Volunteer Coaches are a critical part of our program. Our specialized training equips our volunteers to offer:

- One-on-one support and encouragement
- Help accessing job training and educational resources
- Help addressing issues of child care, transportation, housing, and more

But what sets CWJC apart from other mentoring and social service programs is the component of faith and hope, introduced through prayer and weekly Bible study.

Participants gain:

- Important practical life skills
- Self-respect by providing for themselves and their children
- Assurance in the knowledge that God loves them.

Adversity does not discriminate

Disability. Bankruptcy. The loss of a job. Extensive medical bills. A broken marriage. Women from many different walks of life can face unexpected circumstances and find themselves in need of assistance for their families.

For decades, government welfare programs have attempted to address these needs, yet the number of working-poor families headed by single women has continued to grow.

The Christian Women's Job Corps® of North Carolina (CWJC®) offers an alternative to dependency on government handouts. Following the New Testament mandate to "Help Carry one another's burdens" (Galatians 6:2 TEV), our program provides the support women need to help them move from dependency to self-sufficiency

We believe in the Trinity; God as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; and we believe the Bible as the Word of God. Salvation comes through grace by believing in Jesus Christ as the Son of God, our Savior and Lord. Once saved, the Holy Spirit indwells, thereby instructing, guiding,
